

JOHNS HOPKINS
SCHOOL of ADVANCED
INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

Spotlight on The Balkans: SAIS Virtual Information Session

Wednesday, October 16 | 2:00 to 3:00 p.m. CET

The Johns Hopkins SAIS is hosting an information session with our alumni from the Balkans Region.

Alumni from the (Western) Balkans will share their experiences as Students and Alumni and speak about their careers.

This interactive virtual information session with SAIS admissions and Alumni will also address the SAIS admissions process, careers in International Relations, and scholarships & financial aid.

Sign up to receive your virtual link:

<https://applygrad.jhu.edu/register/SAISSpotlightBalkans>

SAVE THE DATE

OCTOBER 16th, 2024

About

Johns Hopkins SAIS Europe:

Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies, (SAIS) is an American graduate school which offers students a truly international perspective on today's critical issues. SAIS is known as one of the top graduate schools for international relations in the world, with studies in the areas of international affairs, economics, diplomacy, and policy research. Its mission is to educate and prepare the next generation of leaders in government, business, multilateral institutions, and the non-profit sector to solve multifaceted 21st century global challenges through a curriculum strongly rooted in a study of international relations, economics, regional studies, and languages. Its campus locations in the United States, (Washington, DC), Europe (Bologna, Italy), and Asia (Nanjing, China) create a unique global perspective and a competitive advantage in today's multi-polar and technology-driven environment and its over 22,000 SAIS alumni in 140 countries provide an invaluable professional network for graduates.